

The Republican Shutdown: Women's Health is on the Line

Over the past several weeks, House Republicans have made it clear that they will stop at no end to slash critical Planned Parenthood funding that saves women's lives every year. We must let the country know what's at stake – for the sake of protecting the health of our mothers, sisters and daughters.

In 2013, Planned Parenthood provided 900,000 cancer screenings to help women across the country catch cervical or breast cancer early – 400,000 pap tests and 500,000 breast exams. Nearly 88,000 screenings detected cancer early, or identified abnormalities that can signal a greater risk of cancer. Hundreds of thousands of children, siblings and parents are still able to talk to their loved ones because Planned Parenthood saved their lives.

Below, please find state-by-state data that details how many cervical and breast cancer screenings were issued in 2013 (the latest year of data available).
